IMPACT OF YOUR SUPPORT

Okur-Chung Neurodevelopmental Syndrome (“OCNDS”) is an ultra-rare genetic syndrome first identified in 2016. Doctors believe that OCNDS affects thousands; however, to date, 200 people have been diagnosed worldwide. And in 2016, there were only 5 known patients worldwide. There was no foundation, no website, no community, no information, and no OCNDS research being conducted. In 2018, Jennifer and Jason Sills launched the CSNK2A1 Foundation to fund research to find a treatment and cure for OCNDS, and to provide a place for families to turn for information and support. Their daughter was the 6th in the world to be diagnosed with OCNDS.

OCNDS is caused by a mutation on the CSNK2A1 gene. OCNDS is characterized by severe speech delay or inability to speak, global developmental delay, epilepsy, autism spectrum disorder traits, behavioral challenges, and feeding difficulty. Those living with OCNDS have many daily challenges such as swallowing, toileting, dressing, putting on a seatbelt, and making friends. Their days can consist of hours of different types of interventions including speech therapy, occupational therapy, feeding therapy, and physical therapy. Parents and caregivers of OCNDS patients have assumed roles they never imagined. They are advocates, nurses, champions, therapists, fundraisers, researchers, trailblazers, teachers, and paperwork experts.

Why does funding OCNDS research matter? The gene CSNK2A1 creates a protein called CK2. CK2 is found in all human cells. In patients with OCNDS, this protein is disrupted. We are studying how to restore CK2 functionality in OCNDS patients. CK2 is a potential therapeutic target for many diverse human diseases. A scientific breakthrough for those living with OCNDS may also help millions impacted by various other diseases. CK2 is studied in connection with Parkinson’s, Alzheimer’s, autism, COVID-19, inflammatory diseases, ALS, cystic fibrosis, and cancer.

With your support, we established the CSNK2A1 Foundation Research Program at TGen, the Translational Genomics Research Institute. TGen is an Arizona-based, nonprofit medical research institute dedicated to conducting groundbreaking research with life-changing results. TGen’s areas of research include cancer, diabetes, neurological disorders, and infectious diseases. Led by Vinodh Narayan, MD, TGen’s Center for Rare Childhood Disorders (the Center) is a leader in providing critical diagnoses for families and spearheading patient-focused research.

By partnering with TGen, we are helping children who do not have access to genetic testing. Families are not charged for care and genetic testing at TGen. Access to health care and social determinates are enormous hurdles to receiving a diagnosis. Whether it is access to health insurance to pay for testing or getting time off work to go to doctor appointments or traveling long distances for care, there are many obstacles impeding families’ ability to receive a diagnosis. For undiagnosed families and children, TGen is their last hope in their diagnostic odyssey which spans many years and countless visits to doctors and specialists.

In addition, we have assembled a team of scientists spanning the globe, who worked on CSNK2A1 before it was associated with OCNDS. Since our last tournament, we constructed a research toolbox consisting of mouse models, frog models, zebrafish, and patient-derived iPSC cells lines. OCNDS mouse models closely mirror the human condition. Researchers are characterizing the behaviors and looking at brain activity which are crucial steps to answering key questions such as ideal times for interventions. There is potential for treatment that removes the effect of the genetic mutations on CSNK2A1. TGen is conducting high throughput drug screening on zebrafish to determine promising already approved FDA drug compounds which will then be tested on the patient-derived iPSC cells in preparation for a clinical trial. This research has made it abundantly clear that a treatment and a cure are possible.
THE HOPES OF OCNDS FAMILIES

“The best way to predict the future is to create it.” We aren’t leaving OCNDS to chance. We are tirelessly working towards a future in which we have a treatment or a cure for OCNDS. We are creating a future in which our children are not plagued with OCNDS symptoms. With your continued support, we are transforming hope into action.

“Samuel is almost fully blind. Our hope is that he can see the world with his eyes.”
Samuel, 5, Italy

“Ava has a g-tube. We hope one day she can have her g-tube removed and eat a holiday meal with us.”
Ava, 11, USA

“Seizures. It would be great if we can stop the seizures.”
Matilda, 15, Canada

“Harper is non-verbal and uses a communication device to communicate. We hope to find our daughter’s voice.”
Harper, 11, USA

“Could live independently one day.”
Cody, 19, USA

“Jules is non-verbal. We hope one day to hear her hopes and her dreams.”
